2005 Seminar Series

The Industrial Relations Society of Western Australia in conjunction with Curtin University of Technology and Minter Ellison have pleasure in presenting the following seminar:

“The Employment and Termination of Employment of Injured Workers”

Join Rob Guthrie of Curtin University School of Business Law and Rod Collinson of Minter Ellison for an overview of the many complexities and pitfalls associated with the continued employment and dismissal of injured workers. This seminar will consider the hazards of relying on frustration to terminate the contract of employment as well as workers compensation and disability discrimination issues which affect termination and alternative duties. The seminar will review the approaches of the various tribunals where proceedings might be commenced in the event of termination and the avenues open to workers whose employment is affected.

The seminar is intended to be practical. We will work through a case study and cover the latest case law. It should be of interest to HR&IR managers, safety managers, claims officers, lawyers, union officials and anyone dealing with injured workers in the workplace.
