Setting the climate for good faith bargaining: An exploration of the legal and cultural frameworks to achieve good faith in the workplace.

When: Monday 14th December, 2009
Time: 5:30 pm - 7:30pm (Registration from 5:15pm)
Where: Curtin Graduate School of Business
78 Murray Street, Perth WA 6000

RSVP: <http://gsb.curtin.edu.au/> (under Events Tab)

- Good faith bargaining is a central requirement of the new provisions of the Fair Work Act but what does it really mean?
- Can you have good faith bargaining without good faith relationships in the workplace?
- Is there a guide that organisations and practitioners can follow to enable them to create the environment for genuine good faith bargaining?

All these questions and more will be discussed at this interactive forum.

Professor Joellen Riley holds the Chair in Labour Law at Sydney Law School. She is the editor of the new publication Australian Standard of Employment Rights – A how to guide for the workplace.

Lisa Heap is the Executive Director of the Australian Institute of Employment Rights and independent tri-partite organisation formed to promote positive employment relationships.

Together Joellen and Lisa will explore the legal and cultural frameworks for achieving good faith in the workplace.

Attendees will receive a free copy of the AIER's Magazine: The Debate and will be able to purchase the book – Australian Standard of Employment Rights – a how to guide for the workplace at a discounted price.
